Key Findings

1

Conservatives (38%) are up 14 points on Liberals (24%) in the federal decided vote.

Among decided voters, Conservatives are leading confidently in Alberta, the Prairies, British Columbia, and Ontario. In the Atlantic region, they are tied with Liberals. Bloc Québécois leads with 32% in Québec.

2

A majority are dissatisfied with the performance of the federal government in Canada.

60% report dissatisfaction – the highest ever recorded. 35% report satisfaction.

3

At 70%, Time for Change is highest ever recorded.

7-in-10 agree with the statement “It is time for a change in government here in Canada,” 8 points higher compared to Harper’s 2015 loss.

4

Liberals are 10 points behind Conservatives in CPC-to-LPC Defector ridings – 34 constituencies that flipped from Conservative to Liberal and helped secure the Liberals’ victory in the 2015 elections.

The decline in Liberal support is concentrated among voters aged 55 and older, a demographic group that traditionally has high voter turnout in elections.

5

Poillievre holds a 15-point lead as the preferred choice for Prime Minister.

There is a notable shift in women’s perceptions. With a more negative sentiment towards Justin Trudeau, the gender gap is narrowing.

Methodology

Survey Methodology

These are the results of an online survey conducted between October 5th and October 31st, 2023.

Method: This online survey was conducted using INNOVATIVE’s Canada 20/20 national research panel with additional respondents from Lucid, a leading provider of online samples. Each survey is administered to a series of randomly selected samples from the panel and weighted to ensure that the overall sample’s composition reflects that of the actual Canadian population according to Census data to provide results that are intended to approximate a probability sample.

Sample Size: n=5,974 Canadian citizens, 18 years or older. The results are nationally weighted to n=3,500 based on Census data from Statistics Canada.

Field Dates: October 5th and October 31st, 2023.

Weighting: Results for Canada are weighted by age, gender, region, education, and self-reported federal past vote to ensure that the overall sample’s composition reflects that of the actual population according to Census data, in order to provide results that are intended to approximate a probability sample. Weighted and unweighted frequencies are reported in the table.

Margin of Error: This is a representative sample. However, since the online survey was not a random probability-based sample, a margin of error cannot be calculated. Statements about margins of sampling error or population estimates do not apply to most online panels.

Note: Graphs may not always total 100% due to rounding values rather than any error in data. Sums are added before rounding numbers.

Federal Seat Clusters

Methodology

In Canada, we count seats, not votes. Similar to American Presidential elections, you can win the popular vote but lose the election. In fact, this happened to Justin Trudeau's father in 1979.

Analysts typically address this issue by examining seats regionally. However, seats within the same region can move differently. This release aims to provide a more nuanced understanding of the seat-by-seat contest. Our analysis involves:

1. An analysis of federal electoral districts ("seats") grouped into 12 clusters based on:
 - A combination of which parties are most competitive in those seats across the last 3 elections, and
 - Key regional breaks that influence the party system in Canada.
2. April '23 and October '23 national surveys that include federal votes, with a sample size of 2,000 (unweighted 3,680) for April and 3,500 (unweighted 5,974) for October.

In each survey, we collect respondents' postal codes, allowing us to assign them to ridings and group their responses accordingly.

The following slides present the output of our analysis, summarizing the October and April '23 federal vote intentions in these clusters compared to the past four elections.

Overview

In Canadian elections, we count seats not votes.

For this analysis, seats have been grouped into clusters, with a focus on similarities in historical party success and regional characteristics within each cluster.

These seat clusters can help us better understand shifts in party support within ridings that have traditionally exhibited similar voting patterns. Each cluster is listed on the right with the sample size of respondents from that cluster.

The core analysis guiding these groupings relies on the election results in each seat over the past three elections. This approach provides insight into the potential range of outcomes in each seat based on recent electoral history.

The analysis further distinguishes “Strong” seats, indicating those consistently won by a margin greater than 10%. Additionally, specific criteria for each party and geographical factors are taken into account to refine the distinctions within each cluster.

You can read more about the methodology here.
